Before December 2: Your Homework

NWA Mathematics due Wednesday, November 25

The December 2 meeting starts from results, not from a blank page. Before then, open the Workshop (link in Ryan's email; sign in with your @nwacademy.org account) and go to Review. The My homework box at the top keeps your score. It takes about 30 minutes, and you can do it in pieces.

1. Update your course

Courses → your course. Read every proficiency. Fix the wording, move it to the right thread, retire it or add what's missing (Teacher's Guide, section 1). When you've read the whole course, click Mark as read through at the top of the page. Edits count from October 21.

2. Vote on every card

In Review, every possible overlap, every open question and every proposal has five buttons. One click is a vote; it saves at once.

- Keep both: different depth, so both stay
- Move to one course: it belongs in only one
- Merge wording: same idea, so make the statements match
- Add a proficiency: something is missing
- Needs discussion: bring it to the meeting

A one-line reason box appears once you vote (optional; press Enter to save). Changed your mind? Click another button. Click your vote again to take it back. Next card to vote on jumps to the next card you haven't voted on.

After you vote on a card, you see how everyone has voted on it so far. Ryan sees who voted what. Votes stay in the department Sheet and are never published.

3. Propose what's missing

See a hole (no course teaches it), a collision (two courses teach the same thing) or anything else the department should decide? + Propose an item: pick the type, tick the courses, and write a line or two. It goes straight onto everyone's ballot. You can withdraw your own proposal.

Done means

- Votes cast shows X of X
- your courses are read through
- any holes you know about are proposed

Voting closes at 11:59 pm on Wednesday, November 25. On November 26 the tallies go into the meeting agenda, so on December 2 we start with the cards everyone agrees on and spend the time on the ones marked Needs discussion.

Good to know

- Votes are advice, not decisions. Spiral, redundant or resolved is recorded at the meeting.
- New proposals appear for others after they press refresh in the teal bar.
- Something not working? Tell Ryan.
